Under no circumstances should you use any type of substances as a means of preventing or treating COVID-19 infection, or dealing with your fear, anxiety, boredom or social isolation. Substance use WILL NOT protect you from COVID-19, or help you deal with your emotions and stress. Substance use and isolation may also increase the risk of suicide so call a helpline if you have suicidal thoughts.

What you need to know

- Do not use any type of substances including prescription drugs such as opioid analgesics (e.g. tramadol) and benzodiazepines without consultation with and close monitoring from your doctor. Help others do the same as substances do not protect against COVID-19.
- Avoid using substances as they can increase your risk of acquiring COVID-19 infection through shared objects (e.g. tableware, waterpipes for smoking, syringes), and neglecting health protective measures like hand hygiene, respiratory etiquettes and physical distancing.
- Do not undermine your own immune system and health by using substances as they can result in worse outcomes from COVID-19 (e.g. smoking and inhaling substances can reduce your lung function and increase your vulnerability to infections).
- Reach out for help if you or someone close to you are using substances or suffering from substance use disorders (i.e. a strong internal drive to use a substance and continue using it irrespective of its harm).

Avoid alcohol altogether so that you do not undermine your own immune system and health and do not put at risk the health of others.

Do not use alcohol as a way of dealing with your emotions and stress as isolation and drinking may also increase the risk of suicide. Please call a health helpline if you have suicidal thoughts.

Reach out for help if you think your drinking or the drinking of someone close to you is out of control.

Never mix alcohol with medications even herbal or over-the-counter remedies, as this could make them less effective, or it might increase their potency to a level where they become toxic and dangerous.

Avoid alcohol as a social cue for smoking and vice versa, as smoking is associated with more complicated and dangerous progression of COVID-19.

Make sure that children and young people do not have access to alcohol and do not drink in their presence - be a role model. Monitor the screen time of your children, as TV and other media are flooded with alcohol advertising and misinformation that may stimulate early initiation and increased consumption.

Discuss with children and young people the problems associated with drinking and COVID-19 such as violations of quarantine and physical distancing, which can make the pandemic worse.

Helping children cope with stress during the COVID-19 outbreak

Children may respond to stress in different ways such as being more clingy, anxious, withdrawing, angry or agitated, bedwetting etc.

Respond to your child's reactions in a supportive way, listen to their concerns and give them extra love and attention.

Children need adults' love and attention during difficult times. Give them extra time and attention.

Remember to listen to your children, speak kindly and reassure them.

If possible, make opportunities for the child to play and relax.

Try and keep children close to their parents and family and avoid separating children and their caregivers to the extent possible.

If separation occurs (e.g. hospitalization) ensure regular contact (e.g. via phone) and re-assurance.

Keep to regular routines and schedules as much as possible, or help create new ones in a new environment, including school/learning as well as time for safely playing and relaxing.

Provide facts about what has happened, explain what is going on now and give them clear information about how to reduce their risk of being infected by the disease in words that they can understand depending on their age.

This also includes providing information about what could happen in a re-assuring way (e.g. a family member and/or the child may start not feeling well and may have to go to the hospital for some time so doctors can help them feel better).

பயப்பட வேண்டாம்
